9.1 Succession Planning

Kingston District Council recognises that it has an ageing workforce and that during the life of this agreement, there is a high probability that a number of staff may begin to consider their retirement. It is therefore critical that the organisation begin succession planning to ensure that individuals are well supported in their transition to retirement and that the organisation is able to continue to deliver its objectives. Therefore, succession planning and a succession planning culture are key organisational priorities.

To achieve this, a succession culture should be developed at all levels, with shared responsibility for succession planning across the organisation, which include a willingness to multi-skill, to increase personal knowledge and to proactively share information with others.

The Objectives of the succession planning process are that it should:

- Meet current and evolving organisation needs; and
- Address the relevant career aspirations and development preferences of employees, and
- Develop a high degree of participation, team work, trust and shared commitment to the goals and policies of the Kingston District Council and the achievement of real and sustainable improvement in productivity and
- Be relatively simple and flexible and
- Be developed with clear objectives, timeframes and ongoing evaluation, built into the process.

The succession planning process is to be informed by:

- Collaboration and consultation across the whole organisation
- The performance management process as a starting point for considering the performance and potential of all employees.
- A focus on identifying a robust field of potential internal candidates for leadership roles and should not involve the development of lists or 'queues' for promotion, which would conflict with an appropriate merit value approach.
- Participation in the ongoing development of a multi-skilled workforce through education and appropriate training. Existing recruitment, performance management, learning and development, leadership development and career planning initiatives.

9.2 Multi Skilling
